

Books by Irish Writers
And Books about Ireland

MAUNSEL & CO., LIMITED
96 MID. ABBEY STREET, DUBLIN

FROM "THE SPHERE."

"I take this opportunity of saying a word with regard to the house of Maunsel of Dublin. Long years ago, even to the end of the eighteenth century, Dublin was a remarkable centre of book production. Some of the most interesting books in English literature were first published there, and some of the best examples of binding came from that city.

"Then there fell upon Ireland a decay of long years in which book production suffered in a remarkable degree. Book-binding, printing and all the elements of good publishing fell into the back-ground.

"There has been a remarkable revival in Dublin during the last decade, and I count the firm of Maunsel as at the very head of it. A long series of books, both expensive and cheap, have been issued by them, perhaps the most noticeable being 'The Memoirs of Miles Byrne,' of which a new edition, with an introduction by Stephen Gwynn, was produced last year. These two handsome volumes will hold their own alike in their binding, paper, and printing with any books produced in England; and no one could ask for a better edition of any author than that of Mr. Synge's plays produced by this firm."—C. K. S.

22

December, 1909.

AUTHORS AND EDITORS

	PAGE		PAGE
HER EXCELLENCY THE COUNTRESS OF ABERDEEN	22, 23	SUSAN MITCHELL . . .	14
LADY GREGORY . . .	5	CANON LANGBRIDGE . .	8
LORD DUNSANY . . .	21	RUTHERFORD MAYNE . .	9
SIR HORACE PLUNKETT .	26	THOMAS MACDONAGH . .	9
A. E.	21	T. MACDONNELL . . .	28
JANE BARLOW	21	SEOSAMH MACCATHM- HAOIL	7, 12
FRANCIS JOSEPH BIGGER .	20	ALICE MILLIGAN . . .	16
GEORGE BIRMINGHAM . .	19	MICHAEL F. J. M'DONNELL	26
SYDNEY BROOKS . . .	27	J. H. D. MILLER . . .	27
WILLIAM BUCKLEY . . .	19	CHARLOTTE GRACE O'BRIEN	6
WILLIAM BOYLE	9	SEUMAS O'KELLY . . .	9
EVA GORE BOOTH . . .	14	W. F. ROBINSON . . .	9
LOUIE BENNETT	18	R. BARRY O'BRIEN . .	29
JAMES H. COUSINS 12, 13,	28	SEUMAS O'SULLIVAN . .	14
PADRAIC COLUM. 9, 12, 14,	21	REV. CANON F. W. O'CONNELL	28
PAUL DUBOIS	24	LEWIS PURCEL	9
LYNN DOYLE	18	P. H. PEARSE	28
F. EATON	28	K. F. PURDON	21
JOHN EGLINTON	14, 21	"PAT"	27
ROBERT ELLIOT	8	T. W. ROLLESTON . . .	6
LEONARD FORD	29	F. RYAN	14
C. MILLIGAN FOX . . .	16	BERNARD SHAW	21
STEPHEN GWYNN, M.P. 6, 19, 20, 21		J. M. SYNGE	10, 11, 21, 29
ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES	15	JAMES STEPHENS . . .	13
MARY A. HUTTON . . .	17	DERMOT CHENEVIX TRENCH	27
MATTHEW JOHNSON . . .	8	CHARLES WEEKES . . .	14
T. M. KETTLE, M.P. 24, 29		WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS	21, 30
THOS. KEOHLER	14	ELLA YOUNG	8, 14
SHANE LESLIE	6, 13
L. M. LITTLE	8

BOOKS IN ATTRACTIVE BINDING FOR PRESENTATION.

SEVEN SHORT PLAYS. Bound in quarter vellum.
6s. net.

POEMS. By ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES. In two vols., full calf, gilt. 3s. net each.

In response to numerous requests we have bound a selection of our books in velvet Persian yapp. The following books are now ready in this popular style and in assorted colours (Saffron, Russett, Cerise, Emerald
Green, Olive Green; and Purple :—

Lough Derg in Ulster	Songs of Oriel
Wild Earth	Sea Spray
The Gilly of Christ	The Bell Branch
The Awakening	The Coming of Lugh

2/6
NETT.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

SEVEN SHORT PLAYS. By LADY GREGORY.
With Portrait by Mancini. Irish linen back, 3s. 6d.
net. Quarter Vellum, 6s. net.

Contains—Spreading the News, Hyacinth Halvey, The Rising of the Moon, The Jack-daw, Workhouse Ward, The Travelling Man, The Gaol Gate.

"It may be said outright their joy is a public possession. . . . Lady Gregory has the power of tragic simplicity. Her people are felt, they exist, they speak to us, and we know and love them. These plays deserve wide recognition. Be they recommended as entirely admirable."—Daily Mail.

"There is indeed something very fine in the genius of Lady Gregory, which enables her thus truly and delicately to convey the fine edge of humour and the preying loveliness of grief. She has a very sure hand. It would be hard to recommend too highly this ingratiating volume of plays."—Daily News.

"It is worth adding that the greater number of plays produced have been published and that they make the most delightful reading. To mention only a single volume—Lady Gregory's Seven Short Plays—page after page of it given Drama that is Literature and Literature that is Drama."—Pall Mall Gazette.

 A Special List, giving plots, number of characters, &c., of the plays and particulars of the fees to be paid for performances can be had on application.*

THE KILTARTAN HISTORY BOOK. By LADY GREGORY. With coloured illustrations by Robert Gregory. Paper Covers, 1s. net. Boards, 1s. 6d. net.

Extract from the Author's Notes.

"I have given this book its name because it is at my own door, in the Barony of Kiltartan, I have heard a great number of the stories from beggars, pipers, travelling men, and such pleasant company. But others I have heard in the Workhouse, or to the north of Galway Bay, in Connemara, or on its southern coast, in Burren. I might, perhaps, better have called the little book Myths in the Making. . . .

"A sociable people given to conversation and belief; no books in the house, no history taught in the schools; it is likely that must have been the way of it in old Greece, when the king of highly civilised Crete was turned by tradition into a murderous tyrant owning a monster and a labyrinth. It was the way of it in old France too, one thinks, when Charlemagne's height grew to eight feet, and his years were counted by centuries: 'He is three hundred years old, and when will he weary of war?' Anyhow, it has been the way of modern Ireland—the Ireland I know—and when I hear myth turned into history, or history into myth, I see in our stonebreakers and cattle drivers, Greek husbandmen or ancient vinedressers of the Loire."

LOUGH DERG IN ULSTER. The Story of St. Patrick's Purgatory. By SHANE LESLIE. Illustrated by Clare Frewen. Boards, 1s. net. Velvet Persian, 2s. 6d. net.

"This little book," the author states in the preface, "is meant to give a glimpse of a very legendary past. The first story is of the nature of an allegory. The second and third I gleaned from the spirit of old Celtic monasteries. 'The Coming of the Danes' is a story told of many holy places at the time. The others are more historical, for the visions of Owen were in most libraries of the Middle Ages, and the expulsion of the canons is remembered yet by the people."

CHARLOTTE GRACE O'BRIEN. A selection from her Writings and Correspondence, with a Memoir by Stephen Gwynn. Illustrated. Cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

Miss Charlotte Grace O'Brien, daughter of William Smith O'Brien, the only one of his children who shared his National opinions, was the authoress of a novel, "Light and Shade," dealing with the Fenian movement, and of two volumes of verse, as well as many scattered contributions through English and Irish periodicals. She possessed remarkable gifts as a writer, but to the public at large she was chiefly known by her work in connection with emigration. In '81 and '83, when the rush was most appalling, she set herself to reform the conditions of steerage passengers and of accommodation for the emigrants, both in Queenstown and New York, opening a common lodginghouse in Queenstown, and herself crossing the Atlantic as a steerage passenger. This public work, added to her private connections, brought her into contact with some leading personages on both sides of the Atlantic, and the history of her career, as well as a sketch of her original and striking personality, has been given in a full memoir by her nephew, Stephen Gwynn, who has selected for the volume those of her essays and verses which seemed of special merit.

SEA SPRAY: Verses and Translations. By T. W. ROLLESTON. Fcap. 8vo. Boards, 1s. net. Velvet Persian, 2s. 6d. net.

The first collection in book form of poems by this well-known writer.

THE MOUNTAINY SINGER. By SEOSAMH
MACCATHMHAOIL. Pott 4to., 2s. 6d. net.

"This is a singer of the freshness and largeness of nature. He has a fine direct simplicity of effect."—Evening Standard.

"Seosamh MacCathmhaoil sings exquisite songs of the hill, the home, the stream, and field, and lights up for us a wondrous vision of a wonderful world where all the dross of earth is transmuted to fine gold."—Irish Independent.

"The charm of his music may be gathered from the opening verses of 'I am the gilly of Christ.' . . . 'The Mountainy Singer' is full of music and fancy of this kind. It contains all the best work that the author has hitherto written, and makes us look with expectancy to his future work."—Daily News.

"Quiet and love, beauty and peace, travail and pain, sorrow and death, he sings with a nakedness of rhythm, an unforced melody, and a directness of vision, which combine in his verse as naturally as the green, brown, and purple of the heather."—Earnest Rlys (in the Manchester Guardian).

"This book is rich in various emotions. . . . Lyrically it is both very sweet and very strong; in picture it is often vivid. The religious sense in it is peculiarly deep."—Freeman's Journal.

"There are few things so refreshing to the true literary taste amid the jostling crowd of books by professional writers . . . as an hour of dreaming in the sunshine with one of these slender volumes of Irish verse for a companion."—Inquirer.

"One of the most original and gifted of the young school of Irish poets."—Literary World.

"Yes, elemental is the book, and there is its strength; there also is the strength of modern Irish poetry. Back to the element; back to the sunshine and rain, the naked passions, the loves and the angers of man."—Daily Chronicle.

"None of our young poets has done stronger work than he has."—Irish Times.

THE POWER OF RED MICHAEL, AND OTHER POEMS. By CANON LANGBRIDGE. Cloth.
2s. 6d. net.

"Canon Langbridge's ballads bring echoes of weird visions, quaint legends, or grim tragedy, and there is certainly in the handling of the simple lines a spell which often grips the reader and holds him, as it were, in a momentary trance."—The Times Literary Supplement.

"These verses show a grim power of fantastic tragedy and a considerable lyrical beauty . . . he is a singer who must sing because the song and the story are in him."—Evening Standard.

"'A special collection' might have been written by Kipling or Bret Harte."—Irish Independent.

"Canon Langbridge has a sense of the mysterious—an eye for the creeping and gruesome—and an imagination that comparts his ballads with the moving things they undoubtedly are."—Manchester Guardian.

"Quite in the manner of the old ballad."—Literary World.

"Canon Langbridge has already shown himself a master of the ballad, whether in simple or elaborate stanzas, and few know better than he how to handle a high heroic theme with that touch of the human in it to make the heart thrill."—Glasgow Herald.

THE COMING OF LUGH: a Celtic Wonder Tale.
Re-told by ELLA YOUNG. With coloured illustrations by Maud Gonne. 6s. net. Velvet Persian,
2s. 6d. net.

These are the first Illustrations by Madame Maud Gonne that have been published.

POEMS. By L. M. LITTLE Royal 16mo. Cloth.
2s. net.

A delightful lyric writer . . . her impulsive lyric note verses quite her own, and capable of deepening to the slower and graver measure.

MATTHEW JOHNSON, POET, 1888-1898. With an Introduction by Robert Elliot. Linen back.
2s. 6d. net.

The first publication in book form of this remarkable poet's work.

RECENT PLAYS.

THE CROSS ROADS. A Play in an Epilogue and two Scenes. By S. L. ROBINSON. Crown 8vo. 1s. net.

THE TURN OF THE ROAD. A Play in two Acts. By RUTHERFORD MAYNE. 1s. net.

THE DRONE. A Play in three Acts. By RUTHERFORD MAYNE. 1s. net.

THE TROTH. A Play in one Act. By RUTHERFORD MAYNE. 6d. net.

THE SHUILER'S CHILD. A Play in two Acts. By SEUMAS O'KELLY. 1s. net.

THE LAND AND THE FIDDLER'S HOUSE. Two Plays. By PADRAIC COLUM. With Portrait. 2s. net.

THE BUILDING FUND. By WILLIAM BOYLE.

WHEN THE DAWN HAS COME. A Tragedy. By THOMAS McDONAGH. 1s. net.

THE PAGAN. By LEWIS PURCEL. 1s. net.

* A Special List of Irish Plays giving plots, number of characters, time of performance and acting fee for those available for performance can be had on application.*

"A delight from beginning to end."—William Archer.

Third Edition

THE PLAYBOY OF THE WESTERN WORLD. A Comedy in Three Acts. By J. M. SYNGE. Cr. 8vo. Cloth, with preface and portrait of the Author, 2s. net. Paper cover, 1s. net.

"The play, as I read it, is profoundly tragic. . . . It is a tragedy that does not depress—it arouses and dilates. There is cynicism on the surface, but a depth of ardent sympathy and imaginative feeling below, and vistas of thought are opened up that lead from the West of Ireland shebeen to the stars. . . . I said to myself when I had read two pages, 'This is literature,' and when I laid down the book at the last line, 'This is life.'"

—T. W. Rolleston (Independent).

"This intensely national Irish Play. . . . A comedy of amazing fidelity to the Irish peasant's gift and passion for a special quality of headlong, highly figured speech that rushes on, gathering pace from one stroke of vividness to another still wider and better. . . ."—Manchester Guardian.

"Mr. Synge . . . certainly does possess a very keen sense of fact, as well as dramatic power and great charm of style . . . one of the finest comedies of the dramatic renaissance . . . sustained dramatic power. . . . These peasants are poets, as certainly they are humorists, without knowing it. Certain passages of 'The Playboy' read like parts of the English Bible. There is the same direct and spontaneous beauty of image. . . . Mr. Synge has achieved a masterpiece by simply collaborating with nature. He and the Irish are to be congratulated."—Holbrook Jackson (The New Age).

"If I were asked to name the masterpiece of the year from the point of view of pure literature, I am not sure that my choice would not fall upon 'The Playboy of the Western World' by Mr. J. M. Synge. . . . In imagination, in colour, in felicity of phrase, it is a delight from beginning to end."—Mr. Archer in The Tribune.

THE TINKER'S WEDDING. A Play in Two Scenes. By J. M. SYNGE. Uniform with "The Playboy." Cr. 8vo. 2s. net.

"'The Tinker's Wedding' surpassed anything that he has hitherto written in the sphere of comic drama. I think you will have to go to Spain, indeed, in order to find anything so deliciously maliciously comic as this. It is a play all lovers of Mr. Synge's wonderful grotesques will want to read for themselves. No richer addition to the literature of roguery has been made for a long time."—Black and White.

"Mr. Synge's work, with its freshness of outlook and spontaneity of expression, affords a refreshing contrast to the cramping conventions of English drama."—The Academy.

With Illustration coloured by hand.

THE ARAN ISLANDS. By J. M. SYNGE. Large Paper Edition, with Twelve Drawings by JACK B. YEATS, coloured by hand, Cr. 4to, Hand-made paper, 21s. net. A few signed copies, price 2 guineas net. Ordinary Edition, with the drawings in black and white, Demy 8vo, Antique Paper, 5s. net.

"Worth any hundred ordinary travel books. It is full of strange suggestions to the eye and to the imagination. It is continuously interesting."

—R. Lynd (Sunday Sun).

"No reader can put the book down without the feeling that he, too, has actually been present upon those lonely Atlantic rocks, cried over by the gulls, among the passionate, strange people whose ways are described here with so tender a charity."

—Daily News.

"Nothing written by the author of 'The Playboy of the Western World' can be uninteresting or unimportant. . . . A fine achievement, and only a sympathetically gifted man would and could have done it."—The Times.

"A charming book."—W. L. Courtney (Daily Telegraph).

American Press Opinions of Mr. Synge's Work.

"Mr. Synge's plays are the biggest contribution to Literature made by any Irishman in our time. . . . If there is any man living and writing for the stage with youth on his side and the future before him, it is John Synge, whose four plays . . . represent accomplishment of the highest order. It is true that these dramas do deal only with peasants, but they are handled in the universal way that Ibsen used when he made the bourgeois of slow Norwegian towns representative of the human race everywhere . . . it is not only in the avoidance of joyless and pallid words that Mr. Synge has chosen the better part. He has experienced the rich joy found only in what is superb and wild in reality; and so it was just because 'The Playboy' was so true in its presentation of the weaknesses—if weaknesses they can be called—as well as the strength of his men and women, that a furore was raised against it as a sort of satire. . . . The sympathy of the dramatist with his people makes itself felt in spite of his ability to stand apart in detachment from them."—New York "Evening Sun."

"'The Aran Islands' . . . of vast importance as throwing a light on this curious development . . . is like no other book we have ever read. This is not because the people described in it are unique. With the most artful simplicity Mr. Synge gives you first a just idea of the alternate beauty and bleakness of that wonderful coast, and then makes you see the inhabitants in their daily struggle for existence. . . . This book, with its sympathetic insight, is the best possible return that Mr. Synge could have made to his friends on the island."

—New York "Evening Sun."

"Synge is so real it is impossible to resist him. He seems to have the masterful quality of taking a few scattered peasant families, and giving to them a universal import. . . . His plays are alive. They are real plays in real persons, and not the least of their charm lies in the dialogue. . . . He is tilling what is practically virgin soil, and already he has demonstrated he is a skilled and sympathetic workman."—New York Press.

MAUNSEL'S SHILLING POETS.

"I hail with delight Messrs. Maunsel's promising attempt at the distribution of poetry in a form which is at once readable, attractive, and accessible to the slenderest purse. The form and printing of the above three volumes are altogether admirable. The poems themselves are also noteworthy. They have distinction as English verse, apart from that which is theirs as belonging to the Irish literary movement—a movement which, by its intense nationalism, is not only vitalising the mind and imagination of its own people, but has actually succeeded in contributing something to the treasury of the language which is the heritage of all dwellers in these islands, whether they be Teuton or Celt . . . rise to genuine heights of simple poetic expression."—New Age.

"Messrs. Maunsel have just published three little books of very greatest interest and importance. They are designed to give readers who have not followed the Irish literary revival closely an idea of the younger poets of the movement. Three writers have been selected, and we do not think anyone will seriously quarrel with the selections. The aim of the publishers, also, has been to produce volumes of real beauty, and this has been achieved; not only are the contents of the three books charming but the manner in which they are printed, embellished, and bound is artistic in the very highest degree. The work is of the very finest workmanship; there is every evidence of the greatest care of the craftsmanship, and of an exquisite taste—all the more exquisite for its unblemished simplicity."—Freeman's Journal.

"All who are interested in the movement owe a debt of gratitude to Messrs. Maunsel & Co. for the charming form in which they publish the works of young Ireland."—Cork Constitution.

NEW ENLARGED EDITION.

WILD EARTH. A Book of Verse. By PADRAIC COLUM. Boards, Irish Linen back, 1s. net.

"We hope the work of this young poet will be in every country-house in Ireland. If he fulfils the promise of those early verses, he may end by being the most familiar and best loved name in our literature."—Irish Homestead.

THE AWAKENING AND OTHER SONNETS.

By JAMES H. COUSINS. With Marginal Designs by T. SCOTT. Cloth, 1s. net. Paper, 6d. net.

"One of the most beautiful little books I have ever seen—Mr. Cousins has attained a unique mastery over the sonnet."—Irish News.

THE GILLY OF CHRIST. By SEOSAMH MAC CATHMHAOIL. With three illustrations by A. M. WENTWORTH SHEILDS. Royal 16mo. Cloth, 1s. net.

"A book full of lyrical beauty."—Black and White.

" . . . This new book has in it all the living intensity of the other, and is more finished and better wrought."—Irish Times.

SONGS OF ORIEL. By SHANE LESLIE. F'cap. 8vo.

Boards, Irish Linen back, 1s. net.

"These poems have something of Celtic magic still more of plaintive melody, and there is also the pungent acid of the historic wrongs of Ireland."—Morning Post.

"Contains much that is lyrical in its simplicity and spontaneity. . . . Voices with singular sweetness the subtle melancholy and appeal that pervades all modern Irish verse."—Glasgow Herald.

THE BELL-BRANCH. By JAMES H. COUSINS.

Boards, Irish Linen back, 1s. net.

"Marked by a polished simplicity."—Times.

"In the matter of artistic production we have never seen anything nearly so tasteful or beautiful. . . . There are some very beautiful, some very tender, and some delightfully imaginative things in 'The Bell Branch.'"—Leinster Leader.

"There is no better test of the work of a publishing firm than the quality of the verse it issues, and judged by that standard Messrs. Maunsel need fear no comparison with any of their rivals. If the Irish public does not read modern poetry the fault lies with itself, for inside the last few years it has been offered the best of the work of the new school of writers at prices within the reach of the poorest, and in a form that no true book-lover could resist. Mr. Cousins . . . has gradually perfected a method of self expression, and his verse, exquisitely-fashioned, delights with its individual note,"—Northern Whig.

THE QUEST. A Book of Poems. By JAMES H. COUSINS. Crown 8vo. Paper, 1s. net.

"An imagination filled with haunting and refreshing images."
—Black and White.

"Wealth of imagery and loftiness of diction give it no small claim to rank beside many of the finest conceptions of poetic genius."—The Peasant.

INSURRECTIONS. By JAMES STEPHENS. F'cap. 1s. net.

"These are little pieces which strike in simple language, an individual note—often humanly dramatic, though, perhaps, the best is the descriptive 'Chill of the Eve.'"—Times.

"Mr. Stephens is a young man; if he will work he has a great future before him. It is in him to write poetry, fine poetry. . . . If he continues to be brave and strong he will win for himself a poet's fame, and enrich his generation with that gift whose worth is far above rubies—Inspiration."—Irish Times.

"We hope this insurgent will not easily be quelled; we think he has a future."—Morning Leader.

"His merit is that poetry is not with him an echo, but a new way of saying new things."—Northern Whig.

"It is a distinctive, little volume, stamped with the impress of a clear-cut personality."—Freeman's Journal.

THE DREAM OF THE KING'S CUP-BEARER.

By "ANAGH." Royal 16mo. Cloth, gilt, 1s. net.

"The characterization is brief but effective, the thought is lofty, and the verse is noble in expression."—Glasgow Herald.

"Has imagination and a certain spaciousness of phrase."

—Spectator,

THE EGYPTIAN PILLAR. Poems by EVA GORE

Booth. 1s. net.

"The Waves of Breffny . . . is one of the most appealing lyrics the new movement has given us."—Northern Whig.

ABOUT WOMEN. Verses by CHARLES WEEKES.

Paper, 1s. net.

"Mr. Weekes has a vigorous style and a keen analytical mind. His view is not merely engaging or pretty, but powerful, bitter, and, at times, cynical."—Pall Mall Gazette.

VERSES: Sacred and Profane. By SEUMAS O'SULLIVAN.

1s. net.

"He is the literary successor of those old Gallic Poets who were fastidious in their verse, who loved little in this world but some chance light in it which reminded them of fairyland."—A. E. (in Sinn Fein).

THE LIVING CHALICE. By SUSAN MITCHELL.

1s. net.

STUDIES. By PADRAIC COLUM. 1s. net.

SONGS OF A DEVOTEE. By THOMAS KOEHLER.

1s. net.

POEMS. By ELLA YOUNG. 1s. net.

BARDS AND SAINTS. By JOHN EGLINTON.

1s. net.

CRITICISM AND COURAGE, and other Essays.

By F. RYAN. 1s. net.

The SPECTATOR, in a two column review, says "Father O'Flynn is sung wherever the English tongue is spoken."

THE IRISH POEMS OF ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES. With a Preface by DR. DOUGLAS HYDE, and a Cover Design by BEATRICE ELVERY. Vol. I.—Songs of the Gael ; A Gaelic Story-telling. Vol. II.—Irish Country-side Songs ; Irish Love Songs and Ballads. Each Volume sold separately. Price, Boards, 2s. net. Leather, 3s. net.

"Very superior critics affect to despise the gift of writing to music, forgetting that all Elizabethans, from Campion to Herrick, did it, and that their condemnation includes Shakespeare and Burns not at their worst, but at their best . . . the song is the only poetry that has a truly universal appeal. . . . Of all modern songmakers Mr. A. P. Graves is probably the most successful, since while working on a high literary plane, he has attained to that direct popular appeal which makes the song. 'Father O'Flynn' is sung wherever the English tongue is spoken, and Mr. Graves has written others quite as good. . . . Mr. Graves gives us good songs, as we have said, largely because of his Catholicity. . . . They are fine Irish songs in the idiomatic sense. Mr. Graves has caught the true manner, not the mannerism, of the Gaelic renaissance. . . . No other writer from Kerry to Donegal could have written these country-side poems."—The Spectator.

"One of the most facile and charming writers of Anglo-Irish songs."—The Nation.

"Mr. Graves touches the true lyrical note, he is master of rhythm and metre, he possesses both pathos and humour, strength and tenderness."—Cork Constitution.

"Full of charming, merry, sad, and haunting poetry. Mr. Graves pipes on one of the sweetest of Irish reeds."—Daily Mail.

"Daintiness and sweetness of thought, fancy, and description wedded to most musical rhythms."—Daily Telegraph.

"The popularity of 'Father O'Flynn' represents the tribute which the world pays to the literary efforts which fulfil the first conditions of great art—that it shall interpret life with veracity and vividness."—Northern Whig.

FATHER O'FLYNN. By ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES. With additional verses in Gaelic and Latin, and a facsimile of the Author's MS., and OULD DOCTOR MACK. With Ten Drawings by L. D. SYMINGTON. Medium 8vo. Paper cover, Price 1s. net.

The best volume of National Poetry that has been published in Ireland for years.—The Peasant.

HERO LAYS. By ALICE MILLIGAN. Crown 8vo. Antique Paper. Buckram, Gilt, 2s. 6d. net. Paper cover, 1s. net.

"There can be no doubt that Miss Milligan is a poet of more than ordinary quality. . . . She has the root of the matter in her, which is a great deal more than can be said of the average poet; and what is more, she is already something of an artist, and her range is wide."—The Academy.

"Among recently published books of verse few have quickened keener interest and more genuine sense of pleasure than Alice Milligan's 'Hero Lays.' . . . It is a book we lay down only to look forward to taking up again—a book we are glad to possess."—Glasgow News.

"Poems of much beauty and power."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"One of the strongest of the new Irish singers."—The Nation.

"There is a lilt and spontaneity about these Irish legends . . . there is also no little imaginative gift."

—The Times Literary Supplement.

"Miss Milligan is one of the few—the very few—moderns who can retain in a modern setting the strength as well as the beauty of the bardic tales, perhaps because she preserves the simplicity of outlook of the old singers, and has all their joy in a well-fought fight and lives laid down in a great cause. . . . The book . . . has vitality and atmosphere . . . its publication gives Miss Milligan a definite place in the list of Anglo-Irish poets who count."

—The Northern Whig.

"Miss Milligan's book is the best volume of National poetry that has been published in Ireland for years. . . ."—The Peasant.

"Her poetry has . . . about it a most distinctive touch which places her in the front rank of Ireland's present day singers."

—The Gaelic American.

"It is getting rarer and rarer in this old world of ours to find the freshness and spontaneity of thought which flows in Miss Milligan's lays . . . there is a sincerity and a ring in her writing which comes only from the heart of the true poet. Altogether a most delightful book of poems."—M. A. P.

FOUR IRISH SONGS. By C. MILLIGAN FOX. Words by Edith Wheeler and Alice Milligan. The Connacht Caoine, by Tadhg O Donnchadha. Illustrated by Seaghan Mac Cathmhaoil. Size 10½ × 7½. Irish Linen, 1s. 6d. net.

This Glorious Book."—Black and White.

THE TAIN: An Irish Epic told in English Verse.

By MARY A. HUTTON. Fcap. 4to. Antique paper.

Bound in Irish Linen gilt, gilt top. 10s. 6d. net.

"It is sufficient to say—and we say it with a full sense of the high claim we make for her work—that Mrs. Hutton has given us in English an epic poem. . . . It raises the author at once to a very high place among her contemporaries both as a scholar and a poet."—The Irish Times.

"One of the most notable contributions which has yet been given to the task of making our Irish literature accessible to the English reader. Mrs. Hutton has accomplished an enterprise upon which she deserves to be congratulated, not only for its learning, but for the labour it involved."—Daily Express.

". . . Táin is good literature, so good as to call for high praise were it to be judged on its intrinsic merits as a poem."

—Independent.

"The work has occupied the author a whole decade, and is certainly a monumental contribution to Irish letters. There is a fine swing about the verse, with its tale of elemental passions and Homeric combats."—Outlook.

"Mrs. Hutton, in 'The Táin,' has arranged these stories, and linked them together with such cunning skill that the cycle of the Cúchullain legends will appeal to us henceforth not as a saga, but as one of the world's greatest epics. Mrs. Hutton's wide acquaintance with Irish literature, in the original Irish, moreover, has enabled her to throw light upon many things that were dark in most of the Cúchullain books that have so far been published in England. As a result the men and women of 'The Táin' are . . . as human and real, and (if we may use the word in a pregnant sense) modern, as Clytemnestra and Hamlet and Nevil Beauchamp. Mrs. Hutton understands the logic and necessity of her actions, as Mr. Hardy makes us understand the logic and necessity of the action of Tess. Character, actions, the thrill of fighting, all these we have in 'The Táin' as abundantly as we believe they are to be found in any English translation of The Iliad or The Odyssey. We have read Mrs. Hutton's version of 'The Táin' with increasing excitement and delight."—Morning Leader.

"She has the gift of vivid narrative in a high degree, and her manipulation of this long, intricate tale is little short of masterly."

—Northern Whig.

"If I were writing a book about my favourite books I should certainly include among them 'The Táin'—Mrs. Hutton's translation into English verse of one of the most wonderful stories in the world outside the legends of the Greeks. Let everyone, indeed, who loves beauty and heroism and the really great things in literature obtain it and rejoice. Many readers will look back with joy to the first moment at which they were tempted into taking up this glorious book."—Black and White.

BALLYGULLION. By LYNN DOYLE. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

"I took it up to glance at it. . . . My 'glance' kept me glued to the pages till I had come to the end. You have given me a right good time, and I am very grateful. . . . I shall do what I can to make the book known to my friends—a new humourist should be treasure shared."

Coulson Kernahan (Letter to the author).

"The Author draws his characters with a rare knowledge of the Northern peasantry, both Catholic and Protestant, and Father Connolly's speech to the Ballygullion Creamery Society is a Masterpiece in its way. . . . bound with rare taste, and containing between its two covers, waiting to be released, pent-up explosions of delightful laughter."—Freeman's Journal.

"What W. W. Jacobs has done for the man who goes down to the sea in ships, Lynn Doyle should be able to do for the man who goes down to the village in brogues. He has one qualification which he shares equally with Jacobs, though in a different form—and that is the power to make you laugh, . . . genuinely humorous in conception and treatment. Pathos usually accompanies humour, and this rule is not broken in the present case. . . . A book that will make any healthy-minded Irishman or woman laugh—and laugh loud."—Irish Independent.

"Mr. Lynn Doyle gives plain folk what they want, plain fun; gives others, who have long ceased to be simple, what they will value—an insight into the minds and ways of thought of rural people the book is good."—Morning Leader.

"Gifted with a generous share of genuine humour characters are true to life told with a swing and vim that is irresistible. . . . For anyone wishing a good genuine Irish book 'Ballygullion' is to be recommended."

—Belfast Evening Telegraph.

A PRISONER OF HIS WORD. By LOUIE BENNETT. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

"This entrancing book. . . . It would be almost impossible to overpraise the way the story is told. . . . The accounts of Russell and his companions are vividly historical, not mere portraits, but instinct with life and individuality. . . . With all this insight into history and character, every line is picturesque and striking."—Freeman's Journal.

"It is a story of very real happenings. The grim prison scenes, and the grimmer execution scenes form incidents which have an added poignancy by reason of the fact that we feel their reality. . . . Miss Bennett has added one to the very few stories which have successfully delineated one of the most difficult periods in all history to handle."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"This interesting story."—Daily News.

"A thrilling and well told tale of real happenings. . . . This fine story."—Belfast Newsletter.

"A powerful and moving story written with skill and restraint."—Aberdeen Free Press.

MAUNSEL'S SHILLING FICTION.

THE NORTHERN IRON. By GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM, Author of "The Seething Pot," "Hyacinth," and "Benedict Kavanagh." Cr. 8vo. Antique Paper. Cloth. 1s. net.

"There can be no doubt that this story will have a great success, for it is intensely alive and holds the interest from start to finish The story is very exciting; the author has wonderful power of keeping his grip on it and describing the incidents with relentless force."—Daily Telegraph.

"Its characters are finely drawn and its interest compelling."
—Morning Leader.

"The book is extremely well done all round, and will be read as much for its engrossing story as for the admirable picture it gives of those stirring times which closed the eighteenth century."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"One of the most readable of recent novels."—Black and White.

"Few novels published this season can compare with 'The Northern Iron' for breadth of conception and simple effectiveness of treatment."—Evening Standard and St. James' Gazette.

"A virile romance of the Rebellion of '98."—Literary World.

"This book is an excellent example of story-telling, where incident follows incident in breathless succession, and the characters are boldly-drawn types representing force, nobility, romance, villainy or absurdity, in various forms and combinations."

—Daily News.

"Mr. Birmingham tells his story in a virile manner. The impetus with which we are borne onward reflects the temper of the men who were fighting for liberty as each conceived it. He gives us many divergent types, and, with the figure of James Hope, introduces a beautiful influence which makes us conscious of the idealism of at least some of the revolutionaries."

—Westminster Gazette.

CAMBIA CARTY. By WILLIAM BUCKLEY, Author of "Croppies Lie Down." Cr. 8vo. Cloth. 1s. net.

"Told with marked literary skill."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"Incomparably the best piece of work the author has given us."—The Outlook.

THE GLADE IN THE FOREST AND OTHER STORIES. By STEPHEN GWYNN. Crown 8vo. Cloth. 1s. net.

"The first tale has a French charm and lightness of touch about it. . . . The two last tales, which are Irish of the Irish, are delightful, and perhaps the strongest in a thoroughly readable book."—Evening Standard.

THE FAIR HILLS OF IRELAND. Written by STEPHEN GWYNN, and illustrated by HUGH THOMSON.
31 Drawings in black and white, and 4 Coloured
Illustrations. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

This book is the record of a pilgrimage to historic and beautiful places in Ireland, so arranged as to give an idea not only of their physical aspect to-day, but also of the history for which they stand. Places have been chosen whose greatest fame was in the days before foreign rule, though often, as at the Boyne, they are associated with the later story of Ireland. In each chapter the whole range of associations is handled, so that each reviews in some measure the whole history of Irish civilisation as it concerned one particular place. But in a fuller sense the chapters are arranged so as to suggest a continuous idea of Irish life, from the prehistoric period illustrated by Cyclopean monuments down to the full development of purely Irish civilisation which is typified by the buildings at Cashel. Seats of ancient sovereignty like Tara, or of ancient art and learning like Clonmacnoise, are described so as to show what the observer can find to see there to-day and what the student can learn from native Irish Poetry and annals regarding them.

THE MEMOIRS OF MILES BYRNE. A new edition, with an introduction by STEPHEN GWYNN,
M.P. Two vols. Demy 8vo. Cloth, 15s.

"No Irishman can read about it without a thrill of pride, no decent Englishman can read it—and every Englishman should read these volumes—without feeling some regret that the men who fought so well for the greatest captain of their time in the Low Countries in the Spanish peninsula, on the Elbe, and on the Rhine, were their bitterest foes, and justified in their detestation of England and all that was English."—Daily Chronicle.

"His Memoirs are of incomparable value. Nowhere else can be found such graphic and complete accounts of the action so renowned in Irish Story. The descriptions convince by their reticence and restraint, and by a certain spontaneity in the narrative, which shows Byrne to have been a literary artist of no mean calibre. . . . We cordially commend these two volumes to the study of young Irishmen. . . . The production reflects great credit on the publishers."—Freeman's Journal.

"Everyone with a spice of adventure in his composition—and who would care to confess that he has not?—will welcome this handsome reprint."—Irish Times.

"The first volume of these Memoirs is as exciting as any tale of imaginary adventure, with the real horrors of a brutal civil war for background. Byrne is no half-hearted partisan; he hates well, but is not unjust, admitting alike the errors committed by his comrades and the decencies of his foes."—The Academy.

WILLIAM ORR (Northern Leaders of '98). By FRANCIS JOSEPH BIGGER, M.R.I.A. Cap. 4to.
Illustrated. 1s. net.

"Mr. Bigger has gone to the greatest pains to make his work accurate, every source of information being fully availed of. . . . We have thus the most authoritative story yet set down of the life and fate of the brave and high-minded William Orr."

—Irish Independent.

These two volumes contain Poems, Essays and Stories by nearly every living Irish writer of note, as well as many of the younger men, this publication is most representative of Current Irish Literature.

THE SHANACHIE : An Irish Illustrated Miscellany.

Vol. I.—Irish Buckram, Fcap. 4to, Antique Paper, 130 pp., Nine Full-page Plates, 2s. 6d. net.

Vol. II.—Fcap. 4to, 250 pp., Sixteen Full-page Plates, 5s. net.

LITERARY CONTENTS BY

W. B. Yeats	Lady Gregory
A. E.	Stephen Gwynn
George Bernard Shaw	A. P. Graves
J. M. Synge	Seumas O'Sullivan
George A. Birmingham	Lord Dunsany
Rosamund Langbridge	Jane Barlow
J. B. Yeats	K. F. Purdon
Padraic Colum	"Pat"
John Eglinton	Lynn Doyle

And other Irish writers.

ART CONTENTS BY

Elinor Monsell	Hugh Thomson
Jack B. Yeats	George Morrow
J. B. Yeats, R.H.A.	Walter Osborne
William Orpen	Elinor M. Darwin

And others.

"That very brilliant little Quarterly."—The Tribune.

"People who can appreciate a fine literary sense, allied to a fine pugnacity, should read the 'Shanachie,' which is a splendidly Irish publication."—Gentlemen's Magazine.

"This excellent little Miscellany."—Irish Times.

IRELAND'S CRUSADE AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS. Being a Series of Lectures delivered at the Tuberculosis Exhibition, 1907, under the Auspices of the Women's National Health Association of Ireland. Edited by HER EXCELLENCY THE COUNTESS OF ABERDEEN. In three Volumes, sold separately, with numerous full-page plates. Demy 8vo. 1s. net each.

VOLUME I.

THE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN

Contains a Preface by Her Excellency the Countess of Aberdeen, an Account of the Opening Ceremony of the Tuberculosis Exhibition, and the following Lectures :—What the Public Can Do in the Fight against Tuberculosis, by Professor Osler—Tuberculosis in Ireland, by Sir Robert Matheson—On the Bearing of Tuberculosis on the Conditions of Ireland, by Surgeon Tobin—Why is Tuberculosis so Common in Ireland, by Sir John Byers—Some Aspects of the Tuberculosis Problem, by Dr. Lawson—On the Economic Aspect of Tuberculosis, by Professor Lindsay—and a Catalogue of the above Exhibition.

VOLUME II.

ORGANISATION AND EQUIPMENT.

Preface by Her Excellency the Countess of Aberdeen—The Climate of Ireland in Relation to the Open-Air Treatment of Tuberculosis, by Dr. T. C. Smyth—The Main Features of the Campaign Against Tuberculosis as it is waged in Germany, by Prof. McWeeney—Home and Foreign Sanatoria, by Dr. Alfred Parsons—The Urgent Need for Sanatoria and Tuberculosis Dispensaries in Ireland, by Dr. F. Dunne—Some Popular Objections to Sanatoria Answered, by Dr. Hare—The Construction of Cheap Sanatoria for Working-Class Consumptives—Conference on District Nursing in Relation to Tuberculosis—The Serum Aspect of the Surgical Treatment of Tuberculosis, by Surgeon MacArdle—The Responsibility of Sanitary Authorities with Regard to Tuberculosis, by Surgeon Colonel Edgar Flinn—The Home Treatment of Tuberculosis.

VOLUME III

OBJECTS OF ASSAULT

With 22 full-page Illustrations

PART I. MISCELLANEOUS LECTURES AND PAPERS

Preface by the Countess of Aberdeen—The Control of Milk Supplies and other Conditions affecting Tuberculosis, by Dr. Chalmers—Tuberculosis in the Lower Animals, by Professor Mettam—Can the Farmer aid in the Extinction of Tuberculosis? by Professor Carroll—Infection and Disinfection, by Dr. Birmingham—Air and Ventilation, by Mr. G. Fletcher—Healthy Breathing and Nature's Defences against Lung Disease, by Professor W. H. Thompson—Some Facts and Fallacies in reference to Tuberculosis, by Sir Charles Cameron—Tuberculosis of Bones and Joints, by Surgeon Lentaigue—Results obtained in the Treatment of Pulmonary Tuberculosis by the Class Method, by Dr. Pratt—The Travels of the Tuberculosis Caravans "Eire" and "Phoenix."

PART II. PAPERS DEALING WITH OFFICIAL WORK IN CONNECTION WITH THE ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS CRUSADE AND THE TUBERCULOSIS PREVENTION (IRELAND) ACT OF 1908.

What Attitude should the Local Governing Bodies assume on the Tuberculosis Question? by Mr. P. J. O'Neill—How School Teachers can aid in the Fight against Tuberculosis (with some Remarks by the Chief Secretary), by Professor Culverwell—Summary of Statistics on Tuberculosis in Ireland—Report of Proceedings of Washington International Tuberculosis Congress—Tuberculosis Prevention (Ireland) Act, 1908—Local Government Board Orders and Memorandum [with a Summary of Provisions of the Tuberculosis Prevention (Ireland) Act, 1908.]

SLÁINTE: The Journal of the Women's National Health Association. Edited by the COUNTESS OF ABERDEEN. First Annual Volume now ready, price 2s. 6d. net. The January number begins a new volume. New subscribers should start with this number.

Published on the 15th of each month, Monthly 1d., from all newsagents or W. N. H. A. branches. Annual Subscription, post paid, 2s. Each number contains Notes by the Editor; Articles on Health and Hygiene, written by many prominent doctors and health workers; Reports of W. N. H. A. Lectures and Branches; and many other interesting features. Numerous Illustrations.

ALL WORKERS IN THE CAUSE OF PUBLIC HEALTH and for Health in the Home should subscribe to this Magazine because it is an invaluable means of intercommunication; it points out the best way to help, and gives advice and hope to the suffering.

"The most elaborate work yet produced dealing with the past, present and future of Ireland."—Daily Telegraph.

CONTEMPORARY IRELAND. By L. PAUL DUBOIS. An English Translation. Edited by T. M. Kettle, M.P. In one volume. Demy 8vo. Cloth. 7s. 6d. net.

THIS book is a translation of an important, and, perhaps, the widest, study of the Irish question that has appeared within recent years—M. Paul Dubois' "L'Irlande Contemporaine." M. Dubois is a nephew of the great Taine, and himself the author of several works on history and sociology. As a Frenchman he has a natural sympathy for Ireland; as a sociologist an intense interest in a country whose conditions of life throw, as he says, such light on the social problems of the day. He writes out of a great knowledge and research, having made a lengthy stay in Ireland, where he met and discussed his subject with Irishmen of all parties, and made himself familiar with every historical authority. The book may be regarded as the successor to G. de Beaumont's "L'Irlande sociale, politique et religieuse," and as a record of Irish conditions at the beginning of the twentieth century should come in time to have the same historical value as that work. M. Dubois starts with an historical survey, and then deals with his subject in three parts, treating of the social and political condition of Ireland at the present day, then of her material decay, and lastly of her future possibilities, her intellectual and material regeneration.

"No more thorough and capable study of Irish conditions and the signs and omens that lie hidden among them, has been published for many years than this substantial volume."—Daily News.

"As the production of a scholar who has mastered the literature of his subject, of a sociologist who works along scientific lines, above all, of a Frenchman who writes with a freshness and an amount of detachment that are hardly possible to our own authors, it is well worthy of being eagerly read and seriously pondered on both sides of the Irish Channel. The book abounds in suggestive ideas and novel points of view. . . . Mr. Kettle . . . has performed the task of introduction with much ability."—Glasgow Herald.

"M. Paul Dubois . . . may . . . claim . . . that his is the most fully equipped and detailed study upon its subject yet presented to the public. . . . Upon the literary quality of the book there can be no two questions. His monograph is brilliantly written; its force and vigour survive the tribulation of translation; and whatever may be thought of his conclusions, the tone of his argument is always suave and well-bred. In short, this book is a masterly thesis—a model of polemical literature.”

CONTEMPORARY IRELAND (Press opinions continued).

—Daily Telegraph.

“His personal equipment is of the first order. He is a son-in-law of the great Taine, and a member of the group which Ferdinand Brunchiré’s erudite enthusiasm gathered round the ‘Revue des Deux Mondes.’ In a word, he is a scholar of genius.”—The Nation.

“A thorough piece of work, such as only a trained historian with broad sympathies could accomplish.”—Tribune.

“What strikes one most in this whole study is the accuracy and minuteness of the information, the acuteness and penetration of the criticism, the impartial spirit and well-balanced judgment with which each question is examined, and the all-pervading sympathy with Ireland that runs through the work.”

—Irish Ecclesiastical Review.

“His book is, on the whole, one which no Irishman will read without profit and without feeling grateful to the brilliant Frenchman who teaches him to know his country better.”

—New Ireland Review.

“A clear, complete, and well-written work.”—Bulletin Critique.

“There can be no doubt that the reader who assimilates this book will have a thorough knowledge of present and past conditions in Ireland.”—Revue d’Histoire Diplomatique.

“Those who wish to follow Irish affairs will find no safer or more enlightened guide than M. Paul Dubois. He has studied every authority, his point of view is wide and generous, his style elegant and dignified.”—Revue Idealiste.

“M. Dubois has a thorough knowledge of his subject, and gives a complete exposition of the Irish question.”—Étude Franciscaines.

“With patience and precision, and often with great depth of insight, he has . . . painted an exact picture of contemporary Ireland.”—Bulletin Historique.

“M. Dubois’ study is, perhaps, the most complete and penetrating that has been written upon the Irish question.”

—Revue Universitaire.

“May be placed beside the still celebrated work of M. de Beaumont.”—Annales de l’Ecole de S. Pol.

“M. Paul Dubois, who has described this noble and lofty movement of thought and of policy (The Gaelic League), has written a fine book, and performed a good work.”—La Cultura, Rome.

“His large volume will, we think, be of great service to the cause of Ireland, and, at the same time, will be of vivid interest to the reader as a remarkable sociological study.”—La Croix.

NOBLESSE OBLIGE: AN IRISH RENDERING.

By HORACE PLUNKETT. Boards, 1s. net. Paper cover, 6d. net.

"With the eloquence and persuasiveness born of sincerity and great knowledge, and with an unequalled authority . . . Sir Horace Plunkett has just addressed to the members of his class an inspiring appeal."—SYDNEY BROOKS (in The National Review).

"Sir Horace Plunkett makes this appeal in so temperate and reasonable a way, he shows so much common sense and such knowledge of the problem with which he is dealing—in short, he is so much himself, so consistent with his own record of disinterested patriotism—that we leave it without further comment than an unqualified commendation to our readers. . . . An outsider cannot do better than admire and be silent."—Spectator.

"Sir Horace Plunkett's admirable pamphlet . . . strikes the high note of patriotism and moral obligation with such penetrating force and sweetness that it can hardly fail to deepen and quicken the social sense of anyone who reads it."—Glasgow Herald.

"The appeal is set out with Sir Horace Plunkett's usual fineness and delicacy of expression, and with all that curious moderation of thought which has already made him so effective."—Manchester Guardian.

IRELAND AND THE HOME RULE MOVEMENT.

By MICHAEL F. J. McDONNELL. With a Preface by JOHN REDMOND. Cr. 8vo. Cloth, 2s. net. Paper cover, 1s. net.

"Mr. McDonnell traverses the whole ground of the controversy between the British Parliament and the Irish Party, dealing in turn with the executive, the land question, the religious question, the educational problem, the financial, social, and political relations between Great Britain and Ireland. He has facts and figures at his finger-ends, and puts his points with much ability, and without an undue use of rhetoric."—Glasgow Herald.

"In 'Ireland and the Home Rule Movement' Mr. McDonnell has written a very useful account of the National movement, and the social and economic conditions of Ireland to-day."—Westminster Gazette.

"Marked by its wealth of telling points and apt historical illustrations . . . Mr. McDonnell strikes us as especially effective in his chapter on the religious question."—Manchester Guardian.

"In a short preface the National Leader commends this work, 'especially to Englishmen and Scotchmen, as a thoughtful, well-informed and scholarly study of several of the more important features of the Irish question.' Even those who are in most direct conflict with the author's opinions will not cavil at the adjectives . . . his style is clear, his language restrained."—Morning Post.

ECONOMICS FOR IRISHMEN.

By "PAT." Cr. 8vo. Antique Paper. 164 pp., Cloth. 2s. net. Paper cover, 1s. net. Contents:—Introduction—Wealth—The Agents of Production—Land—Labour—Capital—Resumé—The Economic Influences of Religion—Suggestions.

"We strongly advise all interested in Ireland to read this book; they will find in it much to think over."—Catholic Book Notes.

THE SORROWS OF IRELAND.

By "PAT." Cr. 8vo, Paper cover, 1s. net. A limited number of copies in Cloth, 2s. net. Chapters on:—The Irish Problem and How I Studied it—Derivation of the Problem—Education—The Leagues—Sinn Féin—Politics—Religion, &c., &c.

"No more moving book than this has been written on Ireland for a century past."—Publisher and Bookseller.

THE NEW IRELAND.

SYDNEY BROOKS. Cr. 8vo. Paper cover, 6d. net. Cloth, 1s. net. Sinn Féin and the New Nationalism—The Gaelic League—The I.A.O.S. and The Industrial Revival—The Politicians—The Church—The Agrarian and some other Problems—Devolution.

"I have nothing but praise for Mr. Sydney Brooks' book on The New Ireland. . . . A masterpiece of clear statement and comprehension . . . he is always brilliant, thoughtful, and persuasive. Everybody, both in England and Ireland, ought to read this book."—R. W. L. (Black and White).

WHAT IS THE USE OF REVIVING IRISH?

A Review of the Language Movement. By DERMOT CHENEVIX TRENCH. 3d. net.

CLERICALISED EDUCATION IN IRELAND.

A Plea for Popular Control. By J. H. D. MILLER. 4d. net.

WHAT HOME RULE MEANS.

And other Leaflets issued by the Irish Press Agency. Demy 8vo. 92 pp. 1d.

A complete symposium of the question, by John Redmond, T. M. Kettle, Hugh Law, E. Haviland Burke, and other members of Parliament.

EDUCATIONAL LIST.

A MODERN GEOGRAPHY FOR INTER-MEDIATE SCHOOLS. By JAMES H. COUSINS. Adapted to the needs of the Programme for 1910. Limp cloth, 1s. 6d. net.

THE WHITE DEMON AND HOW TO FIGHT HIM. By MRS. EATON. A book for children, inculcating preventive methods against Tuberculosis and suggestions in general Hygiene. 1s. net. (Sanctioned for use in National Schools.)

Books in the Irish Language.

CÚIRT AN MEADÓIN OÍCHE (THE MIDNIGHT COURT.) Edited for the use of schools, and with glossorial notes by REV. CANON F. W. O'CONNELL, B.D. Limp, cloth, 6d. net. Paper, 3d. net.

FRÉAMHÁDA NA HÉIREANN. Aodmáin Mac Shíogóir, Cruinneadóir. Seagán Mac Caithneóil, Dáctadóir. 2s. 6d. net. With 10 full-page illustrations.

BLÁTA FRAOIC (HEATHER BLOSSOMS): a Volume of Verse in Irish and English. By NIAL MAC GIOLLA BHRIGHDE. 6d. net.

AN TALAMH: Drama 3 Shíom, Pátrúic Mac Colum do Shíob. "Torra" D'Airtrig. 6d. net.

IN THE PRESS.

AN SGOIL (IRISH CONVERSATION AND READING LESSONS ON THE DIRECT METHOD.) By P. H. PEARSE. In three parts, with illustration in colour. Part I.—Ready immediately. 9d.

TÍR-eOLAS NA HÉIREANN (OUTLINE OF THE GEOGRAPHY OF IRELAND IN IRISH.) By T. MACDONNELL. With coloured maps, 9d. net.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

POEMS AND TRANSLATION. By J. M. SYNGE.
2s. 6d. net.

DUBLINERS. By JAMES JOYCE. 3s. 6d. net.

REVOLUTIONARY AREAS. Notes of Travel in Persia and the Caucasus. By JOSEPH M. HONE and PAGE L. DICKINSON. Illustrated by Photographs taken by the Authors.

THE DAY'S BURDEN: Studies Literary and Political. By T. M. KETTLE. 3s. 6d. net.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF WOLFE TONE.
Edited by R. BARRY O'BRIEN, with numerous full-page portraits and other plates. In twelve monthly parts. 6d. net each.

 PROSPECTUS AND SPECIMEN PAGES IN PREPARATION.

THE YOUNG IRELAND EXILES IN TAS-MANIA. By LEONARD FORD. Illustrated.

POEMS OF IRISH HISTORY. An Anthology of Poems and Ballads giving a complete history of Ireland in Verse. Illustrated.

(By arrangement with Mr. Bullen.)

THE COLLECTED WORKS, in VERSE and PROSE, of WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS.
8 Vols. Price, £4 4s. net. (Sold only in Sets.) A Library edition, with Portraits of JOHN S. SARGENT, R.A., SIGNOR MANCINI, CHARLES SHANNON, and J. B. YEATS, R.H.A. Demy 8vo. Bound with Quarter Vellum back and Grey Cloth side. Printed at the Shakespeare Head Press, Stratford-on-Avon. The entire Edition is limited to 1,060 Copies.

The First Five Volumes are Now Ready, and may be inspected at the Booksellers. Prospectus, with Specimen Pages, on application.

. . . "In these volumes, stands the Poet Yeats we have known, the master of the magic world, the man who has lived upon 'the phantom verge of things,' the singer who could sing with the poignancy of a double exile. Here is the most 'rapt' of modern poets, possessed also of an exquisite humour not uncommon in fairies, and tinged . . . by that deep crimson of indignation which is the inheritance of all Irishmen and of all exiles."—The Nation.

. . . "Anyone who is very much in earnest about having the best poetry in the best form will rejoice to possess this desirable edition."—Scotsman.

. . . "These tall volumes have serene physical splendour, virginal and voluptuous at once, . . . the poet thus honoured is, after all, the one who most deeply deserves it, the one about whose permanence it is least possible to nurse any doubt."—Liverpool Courier.

DEIRDRE; a Play in One Act. By W. B. YEATS.
(Plays for an Irish Theatre.) Cr. 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

W. B. YEATS' PROSE WORKS. Crown 8vo.
3s. each, net. Now issued in new and more attractive binding. (For sale in Ireland only, by arrangement with Mr. Bullen.)

The Secret Rose | The Celtic Twilight | Ideas of Good and Evil
PLAYS; Cathleen ní Houlihan, 6d. Hour Glass, 6d. Pot of Broth, 6d.

The Margaret Eaton School Digital Collection is a not-for-profit resource created in 2014-2015 to assist scholars, researchers, educators and students to discover the Margaret Eaton School archives housed in the Peter Turkstra Library at Redeemer University College. Copyright of the digital images is the property of Redeemer University College, Ancaster, Canada and the images may not be copied or emailed to multiple sites without the copyright holder's express written permission. However, users may print, download, or email digital images for individual non-commercial use. To learn more about this project or to search the digital collection, go to <http://libguides.redeemer.ca/mes>